	(MUSIC)
00:00:04	Debbie Woskow: Women in Asia need to build networks, skills and confidence to supercharge their careers.
00:00:18	Jennifer Ting: There's a fundamental difference between fairness and equality. To have fairness means equipping people such that you can help level that playing field and at HSBC Private Banking our partnership with AllBright is to help ensure that we can have fairness when it comes to supporting women entrepreneurs.
00:00:38	Nicole Denholder: Today we were talking about getting ready for pitching. And how do you really tell your story in three minutes that results in the hook that someone goes, wow, I want to know more about this business.
00:00:48	Linda Chan: Today I want to talk about my project that leverages P2P referrals to reinvent B2C online marketing. From the workshop to the pitch day where everything all came together, And it was really great because HSBC have given a lot of support in terms of the networks.
00:01:05	Pat Dwyer: We believe that Asian businesses can be a force for good.
00:01:08	Sidney Wang: This is something very close to the heart of HSBC, providing a platform, providing coaching to support the needs of female entrepreneurs.
00:01:15	Catherine Lui: This money I'm raising is for digital marketing and making the profit better.
00:01:19	Vince Chan: They are all very confident. When they get out here, they show they're not only passionate about their beliefs, but put those into action.
